We both know that keeping kids engaged and motivated can be challenging, even for the best teachers.

We want to inspire a love of learning in them and there's no better way to do this than through the use of fun and engaging hands-on activities and games.

So if you ...

- love using educational games and interactive hands-on activities in your classroom...
- are interested in finding out how to best use these games and activities in your classroom...
- want access to a FREE growing library of resources just for teachers of Grades 1, 2 or 3...

Click HERE to join the crew of Treasured Teachers and unlock the Trove.

Coping with losing a game can be tricky for some children. one strategy that you can use is to prepare children ahead of time. If you would like to read more about how I do this you might like to read my blog article:

It's Not the End of the World to Lose a Game

Some classroom games you might like:

What to do When I Lose a Game

Helpful things to think or say:

It's just a game.

Congratulations

Maybe I'll win next time.

Oh well, never mind.

That was a good game.

That's okay, you won.

Helpful things to do:

Shake hands with the winner.

Do a high five with the winner.

Tell the winner they played well.

If you're feeling angry - take a break.

Remember - it's not about winning, it's about having fun!
